

BODY OF LATE KING NOW IN THE PALACE

Removal Took Place at Night,
Under Guidance of Troopers
Carrying Torches.

BARONESS WILL REMAIN
NEW MONARCH WILL TAKE THE TITLE OF ALBERT I.

Brussels, Dec. 18.—The body of King Leopold was transferred from the pavilion at Saecken to the palace at Brussels tonight by the light of torches carried by troopers acting as guides. The hearse was covered with crepe and drawn by eight horses with black drapery. It was surrounded by black plumes, and bore the national coat of arms and the coat of arms of the province. The car was surrounded by Leopold's grooms and servants. On either side rode the general officers and the court carriages which followed containing Prince Albert and the court dignitaries.

Tolling of Bells.
As the body was conveyed to the hearse the batteries fired salutes and the bells tolled. The cortege, preceded by mounted gendarmes and squadron of guides and followed by the officers

Pimpily People Bothered With Boils

Should Use Stuart's Calcium Wafers to Rid Themselves of These Annoyances.

A Trial Package Free.
Your blood is badly out of order, otherwise you would not have those unsightly pimples, painful boils, blemishes, blotches, eruptions, and eruptions that are a constant source of annoyance and affliction to yourself. They vex and give you pain and no one but yourself knows what a source of unhappiness they are. So far as you are able you have washed, but these were no good, your trouble was there all the same, only a little more aggravated by what you had attempted to do. There is no use in the world doing this sort of thing; the truth of it is a serious matter and requires serious attention. You must go right to the very source of the trouble and then something tangible and satisfactory can be done, and some good results realized.

The blood must be seen to. Wherever that goes, it distributes to the different parts of the body whatever it carries. In other words, it peddles whatever is in its pack. If it contains good wares all well and good; if it holds pernicious wares, then all is bad. It is a constant distributor of health or disease, and it stands to reason that it must be seen to that its pack is made up of the proper stuffs. In your case there is poison in the pack as evidenced by your skin trouble, the pimples on your face and the boils on your body.

To counteract this bad condition of the blood, it needs what STUART'S CALCIUM WAFERS supply, and when the wafers have begun their internal work the surface of the body will resent the presence of these untoward and foreign exhibitions, and will rid itself promptly and completely of them. The work will be a thorough one and no pretending or veneering. The Calcium Wafers regenerate the blood; make a vigorous and successful attack on the cause of the trouble; storm the fort as it were and in a hundred thousand battles for physical betterment they have some of the most victorious and with colors flying.

We offer a test of these wafers in our free trial package, not a cure understand, we do not claim for them such potency that a trial package can effect a cure, but if we were afraid that they would not accomplish what we claim they will if properly used, this offer of a free trial package would not be made. This offer of ours amounts to almost a guarantee of their efficiency and virtue. Every drugist carries them in stock; you can get a good supply or a box at a time; they are not like a liquid which may lose its strength with long standing, the bottle carefully left unopened. The wafers will cost you 50 cents a box. This is only a reasonable charge made for the wafers and the same all over this country. They make an appeal to good, common, sound sense and need no pomp or blarney or sounding names to make their merits known, or conceal what they lack. For the trial package address F. A. of the general staff and the local authorities, left Laken at 8 o'clock in the evening, arriving at the palace at 8:30. Commanding officers of various corps bore the coffin, on which was the royal crown, to a room which had been transformed into a chapel, where the civil and military authorities were drawn up.

According to the Gazette, Princess Louise's counsel has notified the principal banks that she will oppose the payment of any deposits they may have received in the name of Leopold or Baroness Vaughan and has forbidden the executors of Leopold's will to destroy any papers.

Albert's Forethought.
Prince Albert is believed to have made a master stroke in sending the royal train to the frontier to give royal welcome to Princess Louise. Both Princess Louise and Princess Stephanie are held in high affection by the Belgian people, who consider them the victims of misfortune. The reunion of the separated family is accepted as a good omen for the opening of the reign of the already popular Albert.

King Leopold in his will declared that he possessed but $3,000,000, which he left to his children.

His majesty expressed the desire that no autopsy be performed and said that "apart from my nephew, Prince Albert, and the members of my household I forbid anyone to attend my funeral. My papers shall be destroyed or handed to Prince Albert."

Baron Goffinet, who was private secretary to King Leopold, has been appointed executor of the will of the late king.

Albert, the new king, will take the name of Albert I.

No Civil Marriage.
Paris, Dec. 18.—A special dispatch to the Figaro from Brussels says that Baron Goffinet, private secretary to the late King of Belgium, denied the report that a civil marriage was performed at the death of Leopold, but admitted that a secret religious marriage probably occurred recently, although the king never specifically informed his intimate friends of such a marriage. Should this be the case, however, it would have no legal standing in Belgium and no complications as far as the king's position was concerned.

Baron Goffinet said further that Baroness Vaughan would bring her children to Belgium today, but would return immediately to Brussels, where she would be allowed to remain until her presence provoked a scandal.

a thousand miles away, and most of the articles used by the business of the valley had to be transported across the plains by means of ox teams.

A chair on top of the Dinwoodey shop acquainted the people of the city with the fact that Mr. Dinwoodey was engaged in the furniture business. But Mr. Dinwoodey did not confine his efforts to the making of chairs, tables, beds, cupboards, dressers and other articles of household furniture, for in addition to this work, he also made coffins. All these things were made out of wood grown in Utah.

In the early '70s Mr. Dinwoodey moved from the Main street shop and erected an adobe store building on the site of the present structure of the H. Dinwoodey Furniture company. In about 1883 a three-story brick structure was erected, and this burned down in 1890. The present structure was built in its place. At the present time H. Dinwoodey, Jr., is conducting the business begun by his father in 1857.

Dr. Richards, at the time of the erection of the first Dinwoodey shop, owned the property from the corner of Main and First South streets, north to the old postoffice, and back to Richards street. His home was on that square. The building line in those days was fifty feet back of the present line, and the sidewalks were twice the width they are now.

Callaway, Hook & Francis, president of the Deseret National bank, who gave the firm now occupying it a fifty-year lease. This building has a frontage of fifty feet and a depth of 135 feet, is three stories in height and of concrete construction, and plans for it were drawn by R. Kietting, architect.

HISTORIC SITE FOR NEW STORES

With the gradual expansion of the business district to the east, south and west, many of the old landmarks of the city are falling prey to the housewrecker. The most recent landmark of pioneer days to go the way of other old historic structures is the adobe house, formerly known as the Cummings home, on Second South street, just across the street from the west corner of the Dooly block. Work in raising this building to the ground has just been completed, and on its site will be erected a row of one-story stores for Mrs. S. K. Hooper. Plans for the business block were drawn by Architect Harlow M. Kimball, and a perspective of the row as it will appear when completed is given above.

Many years ago, in the early fifties, which is long before the memory of the majority of the present residents of the city, this old home was built. At that time the nearest railroad was over a thousand miles away, and the pony express and the team were the mediums of communication with the east.

Entering into the construction of the old house were adobe of extra large size made by the builders themselves, and rough-hewn timber for the floors, doors and window sills. The building as originally constructed was a one-story affair, but as the family occupying it increased in number various additions were built, and the principal part of the house was made two stories in height.

When housewrecker's got into the inside of the building they found a fourteen-foot cellar under one part of the house, the existence of which was not known to the present owners of the property. The cellar had been constructed when the original building was built, and then, when the additions were constructed, had been entirely walled in.

A number of years ago the Cummings property was purchased by S. K. Hooper. Mrs. Hooper decided to raise the building to the ground and erect on the property, and so the old landmark was torn down. The new stores will have a frontage of sixty-two feet, with a depth of seventy feet, and will be built of brick.

For many years the old structure was the only residence on Second South street on the block from West Temple street to First West street. With the erection of the new stores there will be a practically solid line of business structures in that block.

TWO AGED SISTERS ACCUSED OF CRIME

Mrs. Caroline Martin and Mrs.
Mary Snead Arraigned for Ocey Snead Murder.

New York, Dec. 18.—Mrs. Caroline Martin astonished the court today by her denial of any dealings with her sister, Mrs. Mary Snead. Both women were brought before a police magistrate to answer whether or not they would fight extradition to New Jersey, where, with a third sister, Virginia Wardlaw, they are all charged with the murder of Ocey Snead, Mrs. Martin's daughter. A further hearing will be held Monday.

Mrs. Martin Spoke for Both.

The sisters stood side by side, heavily veiled as always, and robed in fold on fold of black. Mary was mute, but Caroline showed herself the fighter of the family.

"I hadn't seen this woman," she said, "for a long time until she came to the Tombs. I know little of her. We have nothing to do with each other. Our cases are entirely separate."

Squat, broad and almost shapeless, she placed herself in stolid opposition to the court and the detectives, fighting for time and public sympathy. When she lifted her veil a face was disclosed as brown as a walnut shell, and so wrinkled that the eyes were almost hidden.

Resisted the Officers.
Denied permission to make a statement, Mrs. Martin, who was not resented by counsel, declared she meant to have her rights and resisted the court officials' efforts to quiet her. She led for some time out of the room.

Mrs. Martin was committed to the Tombs to await a further hearing on Monday.

In the course of her effort to free mind in court, Mrs. Martin manifested to declare that at the time of the death of Mrs. Ocey Snead, Mrs. Mary Snead, Ocey's mother-in-law, and Mrs. Martin's sister, was in New York City and knew nothing about the matter.

Prosecutor Mott said he had arranged to have Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Mary Snead held prisoners in New York until he could obtain their indictment and extradition to New Jersey.

Regarded as Significant.

Mr. Mott said he regarded as significant the discovery that Mrs. Martin had visited Fletcher Snead, the long missing husband of Ocey Snead, during the latter's voluntary exile in St. Catharines.

Up to the time Snead's whereabouts became known all the members of the family had asserted that to the best of their belief he was dead.

An East Orange newsboy whom Detectives had brought here today identified Mrs. Martin as a woman whose husband he said he had carried for her in East Orange, not far from the scene of the tragedy, on November 29 last. He is expected to be an important witness before the grand jury.

HOOPER SEES SEES DOCKS AHEAD

Beveridge Now the Principal
Dispenser of Federal Patronage in Indiana.

MAY WORK HIS UNDOING
"GRAND YOUNG MAN" A CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION.

By RODERICK CLIFFORD.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Senator Albert J. Beveridge of Indiana, sometimes called the "grand young man from Hoosier state," is a busy man these days. He is the dispenser of patronage in eleven congressional districts by reason of the fact that the districts are represented in the house by Democrats.

It is this big chunk of federal pie that is giving the senior senator from the banks of the Wabash a touch of political dyspepsia. He is anxious to succeed himself in the senate, and next year the people of the Hoosier state are to pass upon the question.

In many states the distribution of patronage is a source of strength, but there are numerous cases on record where it has been the undoing of the dispenser. Beveridge is the Senator Beveridge has 20 presidential postmasterhips in the eleven districts, to fill. In other words for the 20 offices there are at least 90 applicants, and it is no exaggeration to say that, as a general proposition, for every one pleased there will be at least five disgruntled ones.

Rocks in the Roadway.

Hence the "grand young man" from Indiana is doing some thinking trying to figure just how he can make every one happy with a piece of federal postoffice pie. It is up to him to make the recommendations, and no one can get near a presidential postoffice who has not the endorsement of the senior senator.

Another rock in the senatorial roadway is the impression created by Beveridge when the tariff bill was under consideration in the senate last summer, that his opinion on the measure reflected the wishes of the President. This impression did not last long, for when the President started on his "sewing around the tariff" he did not hesitate to inform the people that the tariff bill was the best ever. If it were not for the 20 presidential postmasterhips that must be distributed by the senior Indiana senator before he comes to re-election he might have clear sailing, but as it is he finds himself in troubled waters with no lighthouse in sight. If he is defeated, which now seems probable, it will be due to "too much postmaster."

Blame Put on Speaker.

Several of the older members of the house were recently discussing the fight being made by the insurgents, when one of them said: "If the speaker really understood the situation, they would have a different opinion of the speaker. I do not mean Cannon personally, but the office of speaker. It is true that the power of recognition lodged in the speaker is many times abused, but nevertheless, it has saved members from going on record when by so doing they would have jeopardized their political fortunes."

The best illustration that this is true is given by a glance at the Congressional Record showing the bills introduced in the house.

You will find there that members who preach economy and reform and who protest against all forms of paternalism, are the authors of measures, many of which no doubt have been introduced at the request of their constituents and that involve millions of dollars. The member who fathers these measures would not vote for them, but he knows they stand no chance, under the rules, so he tells his constituents that he will pass the bill because the speaker would not give him recognition.

"Think it will be better," says the speaker, "if the insurgents are sincere in their fight on the rules, but it is a safe wager that many of the representatives who are supporting them in the newspapers, are hoping that there will be no change, for the reason I have stated."

Clark's Life of Benton.

Champ Clark of Missouri, leader of the majority, expects to complete his "Life of Benton" early next summer. The Missouri statesman has been at work on this for several years. He has been able to find much new material that adds to the great reputation of Benton. In Mr. Clark's opinion, Benton was a man of unique character and possessed of a masterful mind, who made his impression on the history of the country. There is no doubt the book will be interesting, as Mr. Clark writes as he talks.

Roosevelt's Home-Coming.

Friends of former President Roosevelt are looking forward to next June, when the African hunter returns to the United States. They say that while it is the wish of Mr. Roosevelt to avoid any ostentatious and spectacular welcome in New York, nevertheless the people of the Empire state will insist on making a demonstration in his honor that will prove to be the greatest ovation ever accorded an American. The talk is that railroads will run special trains to carry the people who will wish to be present and join in the demonstration.

It is denied by the friends who are planning the celebration that there will be a political significance in the return of the former President just at the time when the New York Republicans will be busy considering the question of who shall be nominated to succeed Governor Hughes, but it is pointed out that there is a serious split in the Republican ranks in New York, and that unless a candidate for governor can be selected who will be acceptable to all factions, the Democrats may carry the state. The assertion is made that Roosevelt is the one man who can unite all factions and take notice.

Furthermore, it is said by the congressional friends of the rough rider that he is such a strong party man that if the New York leaders insist on drafting him he would more or less reluctantly yield and accept the nomination.

There is no denying that there is a feeling among the western Republicans in congress that Roosevelt will be the choice of the people, and that it is pointed out that the machinery of the party is still under the Roosevelt influence. "The Back From Elba Club" suggestion may be regarded as a joke by many, but, if the truth were known, those who disapproved of the Roosevelt policies might sit up and take notice.

Investigation Probable.

Unless all signs fail, the Cunningham-Alaskan coal lands scandal will be cleared in the house of representatives before the session is many weeks old. Representative Hitchcock of Nebraska, who has taken much interest in the matter and read the newspapers' reports, has pending before the committee on rules a resolution calling for the appointment, by the speaker, of a committee of seven to investigate the general and office and its relation to the coal lands and other public domain in Alaska.

This resolution is the whole subject from the time that Secretary Ballinger was commissioner of the general land office, when the Cunningham claims first attracted official notice.

It was after quitting the land office that Mr. Ballinger became attorney for Cunningham, it is alleged, and it is this phase of the case that has called forth some severe criticisms of Mr. Ballinger. If the committee on rules does not report the Hitchcock resolution within a week, it becomes a matter of privilege, and can be called up by the author at any time. Strong pressure is being brought to bear to have the investigation ordered, hence it is not improbable that some action will be taken by the house early next week.

It is hard to believe that Secretary Ballinger will use his influence to try to stifle the resolution, in view of his exoneration by Attorney General Wickersham, who made an investigation at the direction of the President.
